in the 450 class and Varize finished 10th in the 250 class. Lipanovich came in 22nd in the 450 cc KTM, which was able to have Team Guam place 14th in the qualifiers and able to compete the main event the next day, according to the release.

Main event

The final competition filled three motos with mud due to rain. Bloss and Varize returned to compete where Bloss found himself at sixth place in three laps. However, several crashes and a blown engine knocked him down to 16th place, according to the release. Bloss ended up placing 34th in moto 1.

Varize fell to a disadvantage with competing with bikes meant for the 450 class on a bike meant for the 250 class. Varize finished at 29th place, according to the release.

Moto 2 had Lipanovich and Varize compete in the Open class. Lipanovich started off strong. He then suffered a smoked engine which he attended to. Lipanovich ended up at 32nd place. Varize improved by placing 20th, according to the release.

Moto 3, also known as the final moto, had Bloss and Lipanovich compete in the Open and MXGP classes. Bloss pushed through the pouring rain with a missing engine, according to the release. He was able to have his bike attended to, but found they had to forfeit the race to finish 35th.

Lipanovich stayed in the race with a backup bike. He made the switch days prior, according to the release. He pushed through while staying cautious. Though this slowed him down, Lipanovich finished the race in 32nd place and saved his bike. Team Guam overall placed 17th place, according to the release.

Despite the placements, Team Guam was happy to be included in the main event, according to the release.
