

Brady's future with Bucs uncertain

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers spent the past three seasons doing everything they could to try to help Tom Brady be successful.

If the seven-time Super Bowl champion retires or decides to sign with another team in free agency this winter, it will be important to have a plan to replace the 45-year-old quarterback.

Coach Todd Bowles acknowledges as much, although he's not providing much insight into how the Bucs are thinking.

And while there's no definitive timetable for Brady to let the team know how he's leaning, ideally the Bucs would like to have a better idea by the start of free agency in March.

"You want to have plans going into it. So we'll do our due diligence, meet with the parties involved and come up with a plan one way or the other," Bowles said Tuesday, less than 24 hours after a 31-14 playoff loss to the Dallas Cowboys ended Brady's third season with the Bucs.

Tampa Bay enters the offseason with more than 20 players on the verge of becoming unrestricted free agents, including Brady and linebacker Lavonte David, who's been an important component of a defense that helped the Bucs win the Super Bowl two years ago.

David reiterated that while he'd like to remain with the Bucs, he won't rush a decision.

"Of course, you never know what could happen. I don't worry about it too much, though," the 11th-year pro, a team captain, said. "It's not up to me. I'll take time to just reflect, get my body right and see what I'm going to do from there."

Brady had little to say about his future after throwing for 351 yards, two touchdowns and a costly red zone interception in the lopsided loss to the Cowboys.

He briefly retired last February only to change his mind and return for a 23rd season.

"You always want every year to end great. Unfortunately, in sports it doesn't work that way," Brady said. "There are 32 teams in the league, and they're all very competitive, and only one of them is going to feel really good at the end of the year."

Titans hiring Niners' Ran Carthon as GM

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A person familiar with the decision says the Tennessee Titans are hiring San Francisco director of player personnel Ran Carthon as their new general manager, giving the NFL nine minority GMs among the league's 32 franchises.

The Titans interviewed their seventh candidate Tuesday morning in Buffalo senior director of pro scouting Malik Boyd.

The search committee headed by controlling owner Amy Adams Strunk picked Carthon, whose first interview was last Friday, according to the person who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the Titans have not commented on the hiring.

Carthon will be the first minority general manager for the original American Football League franchise founded in 1960 in Houston. He also will be the sixth minority among the past eight GMs hired in the NFL, which has held two programs since late May to promote more minority candidates for front office jobs.

The 49ers will host Dallas on Sunday night in the NFC divisional round after earning the No. 2 seed.

Carthon joined the Niners as pro personnel director in 2017 and has been director of player personnel the past two years. Carthon also interviewed last year for GM jobs with Chicago and the Giants.

He was a pro scout with Atlanta between 2008-11. He played three years in the NFL as an undrafted rookie with Indianapolis between 2004-06. He played running back in college at Florida. His father, Maurice, both played in the NFL and coached with seven teams.
