Mac McClung of the Philadelphia 76ers reacts after winning the slam dunk competition of the NBA basketball All-Star weekend Feb. 18, 2023, in Salt trampolines for legs and only two NBA games on his resume became the league's dunk champion and finally brought buzz back to an event that had been more criticized than celebrated over the last few years.

"He saved the dunk contest," Shaquille O'Neal said, and countless others echoed those sentiments.

Time will tell if they're right. But an event that is designed to create unforgettable moments — Michael Jordan taking off from the foul line, Vince Carter saving "it's over" after a dunk, Aaron Gordon jumpHoward donning the Superman cape — got a massive shot in the arm from a guy who now has more dunks in the contest (four) than he does in actual NBA games (one)."It's a cliche, but you can really do whatever you want to do," said McClung, who is on a two-way contract with the Philadelphia 76ers

and playing in the G League. "I've had so many people even at the highest level ... if you are a young kid, and someone who is an inspiration to you, someone that you respect so much tells you that you can't do it, it doesn't matter. Literally, if you manifest and put your mind to it, you can literally make your life and reinvent yourself every day."

The reactions from NBA players watching the show, both in Salt Lake City and elsewhere, were amazing.

"Tough," Cleveland guard Donovan Mitchell shouted as he watched courtside, while several other All-Stars like Giannis Antetokounmpo with his mouth open in disbelief — filmed the action on their phones.

Golden State's Stephen Curry said on Twitter: "Man was a viral (House of Highlights) high school dunk phenom, still working his way to the League, but lemme go get that dunk contest trophy right quick and bring it back to life!!! Unreal."

McClung knows he is an underdog story. He grew up playing football and baseball in Gate City, Virginia, before deciding sometime around sixth or seventh grade standing barely 5 feet tall at that point that basketball would be his priority.

He started going viral in high school for his array of dunks, and he has handled all the attention that comes with internet 3 fame as well as he can for years.

Love picks Miami, Heat also eye Zeller

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Kevin Love says he has picked the Miami Heat.

Love said Sunday that he will sign with the Heat for the remainder of the season once he clears waivers, a major add for a Miami team that is looking to move up in the Eastern Conference before the postseason begins.

"Miami it is, yes," Love said in a text message to The Associated Press.

Also Sunday, a person with knowledge of the matter said the Heat are finalizing plans to add another big man in free agent center Cody Zeller, with that deal expected to be completed before the team gathers in Miami to begin practice following the All-Star break. That person spoke to the AP on condition of anonymity because Zeller's contract has not been signed.

Love's decision was first reported by ESPN.

The 6-foot-9 forward and the Cleveland Cavaliers agreed to buyout terms on Saturday, ending his nine-year run with the team that he helped win the 2016 NBA championship.

Over parts of 15 NBA seasons with Cleveland and Minnesota, Love has averaged 17.2 points and 10.5 rebounds. He averaged career-lows of 8.5 points, 6.8 rebounds and 20 minutes per game in 41 games, almost all as a reserve, this season for Cleveland and didn't play in the team's final 12 games before the All-Star

That prompted buyout talks, and once they were done, Love chose Miami.

"It would give us another vet, another guy who's been through the playoffs, another guy who knows what it takes to win and get to where we want to go," Heat center Bam Adebayo said.

Love is a five-time NBA All-Star, an Olympic champion and FIBA World Cup champi- 5 on as part of USA Basketball, ₫ and his combination of size \(\mathbb{H} \) and 3-point shooting ability would seem to fit perfectly into the Heat system.

The Heat will come out of the All-Star break seventh in 8 the Eastern Conference at 32- 8 27, five games back of Cleveland for the No. 4 spot.

Miami will become Zeller's third NBA city. He has averaged 8.5 points and 6.0 re-bounds in 494 games with & Charlotte and Portland. The 6-foot-11 center was the fourth pick in the 2013 draft.
