

Final Four

currently holds a profile worthy of a No. 3 seed.

West Virginia: Coach Bob Huggins finds a way to make his "Press Virginia" teams suffocating on the defensive end, and it's no different this season with the Mountaineers (18-5) ranking second nationally in defensive efficiency (per KenPom) and third in field goal percentage defense (allowing opponents just 37% shooting). Offensive outbursts can propel surprise March Madness runs, but smothering defenses tested in a dominant power conference like the Big 12 can mean second-weekend success in the Big Dance.

Penn State: The Nittany Lions (18-5) have emerged as a contender in a crowded, chaotic Big Ten. They've won six in a row, including road victories over Michigan and Michigan State. They've also beaten Iowa, Maryland, Ohio State, Syracuse, Georgetown and Yale for a highly impressive tourney résumé (top-20 NET, II Quadrant 1 and Quadrant 2 wins) worthy of a No. 5 seed. Lamar Stevens (17.6 ppg, 7.0 rpg) has breakout ability, (33 points in a Feb. 8 win over Minnesota).

Colorado: The Pac-12 was atrocious last year. It's vastly improved this year and the Buffaloes (19-5) lead the league standings after being left out of the preseason top 25. A projected No. 6 seed, Colorado is a resilient squad which can be key for March success; the Buffs overcame a 16-point second half-deficit in a win over Stanford last weekend. Colorado won its first matchup against top contender Oregon in early January.

The Nittany Lions (18-5) have emerged as a contender in a crowded, chaotic Big Ten. They've won six in a row, including road victories over Michigan and Michigan State.

A rematch on the road Thursday could be telling of this group's outlook.

Butler: When Brad Stevens left the Bulldogs (18-6) in 2013 for the NBA, it seemed as though it was inevitable the program would dip. Then when Chris Holtmann left for Ohio State three years ago, a similar forecast could have been expected. But LaVall Jordan had this team surging in the first two months with only a one-point loss to No. 1 Baylor on its profile before a mid-January losing streak. The Big East remains crowded, but the Bulldogs' overall credentials have them well positioned at the No. 4 line. If they can rekindle their winning momentum, they'll have an ideal bracket outlook and path to advance in NCAAs.

Houston: The Cougars (19-5) just obliterated Wichita State, a projected tournament team, on Sunday by 33 points and are leading the American Athletic Conference. Coach Kelvin Sampson has a roster with nearly all five starters averaging double-figure scoring. Guard Quentin Grimes (12.3 ppg) is a Kansas transfer who has found new life on a better suited team, and could be a March standout. One thing this team does well is controlling the glass, leading the nation in rebounding margin (10).
