

4 professors earn black belt certifications

Pacific Daily News

Purebred Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu Academy awarded four professors their respective black belt certifications.

The academy, which started in 2006, held a ceremony to award Professor Stephen Roberto with his fourth-degree black belt certification on Friday at the academy's headquarters. Three other professors, Professors Romeo Sanchez, Ronnie Sanchez and Dino Montalbo, were awarded in the ceremony with their first-degree black belt certifications, according to a release from the academy.

"High standards shield us from low-quality experiences. Purebred is proud to see our black belt professors lead by example and encourage our students to never stop learning. They inspire us to be better every day," said Nina Roberto, Purebred's purple belt and communications manager.

The certifications were from the International Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu Federation, or IBJJF. The federation is the largest Brazilian jiu-jitsu governing entity, according to the release. In order to obtain the certifications, the professors needed to go through background checks, CPR certification and several hours of IBJJF seminars. The ceremony didn't just award the professors for their accomplishments, but also inspired other students enlisted in the academy.
