years. She holds her own, she plays smart and always stays consistent, no matter what age she is. She's been the same since I've known her. I still enjoy playing with her, up to now."

Playing against young, uber-talented competition leaves Blair to use her experience, strengths and mental game to keep pace.

Her short game was on display during the recent amateur tournament. Despite being outdriven on just about every tee box, that short game is what kept her right under Jacot on the board.

"The short game, that's where the score counts," Blair said. "I encourage everybody to practice your short game and the putts."

"Since Day 1, her chipping and her approach," Vongjalorn added about Blair's strong points. "If she's 30 or 40 yards in, she's always within 10-15 feet and tracking the pin. That would be one thing I would love to take away (from her game)."

Playing on Guam since 1982, Blair said the development of the Guam junior golf scene in the last decade or so has really brought up the skill level for female golf on island. Vongjalorn got things going on the junior circuit in recent years with players like Jacot, Mina Manibusan and Ava Lintico coming along nicely.

Blair has been there as a coach for most of them and beams with pride on their improvements and accomplishments.

So what's the secret after all these years?

It's pretty simple for the 1999 South Pacific Games gold medalist.

"At this kind of age, it's just 'do what you love'. And of course, friends. Those are the two secrets of my life."
