Chiefs believe late-round gambles could pay off

Dave Skretta
ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — One of the benefits of having so few holes to fill on a roster that has reached back-to-back Super Bowls: The Kansas City Chiefs were able to use late-round draft picks on high-upside medical gambles.

In the fourth round, they took massive defensive end Joshua Kaindoh, whose career at Florida State was interrupted first by hamstring problems and then a significant right leg injury in 2019 that caused him to miss all but three games.

In the sixth, the Chiefs took Tennessee offensive linemen Trey Smith, whose impressive on-field resume was tempered by blood clots in his lungs that may have led several other NFL teams to continually pass on him on Saturday.

If both can stay on the field, the Chiefs might have gotten the kind of steals that allow a winning team to stay on top.

"The board really fell to us the way we wanted it to," said Mike Borgonzi, Chiefs director of football operations.

"When you're going through the process you're obviously trying to get the best value for the players and also try to marry up value with need. I think we did a really good job of staying patient through the draft."

The Chiefs filled their biggest needs in the second round, drafting middle linebacker Nick Bolton out of Missouri and center Creed Humphrey from Oklahoma. But they also were in need of an athletic pass rusher and offensive line depth.

That made Kaindoh and Smith perfect fits later in the draft.

Kaindoh, who put up impressive numbers at the Seminoles' pro day, could help the Chiefs deal with the loss of defensive ends Tanoh Kpassagnon and Alex Okafor to free agency. They still have Taco Charlton on a one-year deal and have toyed with moving defensive tackle Chris Jones outside, and that could allow Kaindoh to ease into professional life.

It also could give him time to prove he can stay healthy.

The 6-foot-6, 260-pound pass rusher has prototypical size, a massive wing span, and the natural ability that made him a five-star prospect coming out of high school. But all those injuries, coupled with coaching turnover at Florida State, kept Kaindoh from approaching his ceiling — something the Chiefs believe is quite high.

"Any time you get to the mid-rounds, you're looking for traits. That length, the explosion," said Ryan Poles, Chiefs assistant director of player personnel. "Obviously we know the injuries have been documented, but we believe we can get the best out of him. We've got a great training staff and obviously again, you go back to our process: We went through it with our medical staff and they felt comfortable that we could get this guy to optimal performance level."

Head trainer Rick Burkholder and team physician Dr. Mike Monaco must have given Smith the same green light, despite a draft process hindered by the COVID-19 pandemic that made typical examinations much more difficult.

Blood clots in his lungs kept him out of spring practice in 2018, and while blood thinners got him back on the field, Smith missed five more games that season when doctors worried he had a recurrence of clots.

Working with specialists and team doctors, Smith was able to get on the right series of medications to keep the clotting in check. That allowed him to start 12 of 13 games at left guard in 2019, when he was first-team All-SEC, and he was confident enough in his health and ability that he played each of Tennessee's 10 games last season rather than opting out.

"I've been in absolute perfect health. No issues at all," said the 6-6, 335-pound prospect. "Just certain things happen for reasons. God always has a plan and intention for my life. And in terms of motivation, I'm always going to be motivated."

The immediate motivation? Make the team and show he can contribute.

The Chiefs have completely rebuilt their offensive line after its debacle in the Super Bowl, adding Humphrey to a mix that includes two-time Pro Bowl tackle Orlando Brown Jr., veteran guard Joe Thuney and former All-Pro Kyle Long. But the Chiefs learned the importance of depth last season, when injuries and opt outs left them with a decimated bunch to face Tampa Bay. That means Smith could have a chance to see the field next season.

AVAILABLE FOR PUBLIC COMMENT
2021 Low Income Housing Tax Credit (LIHTC) Program Qualified Allocation Plan (QAP)
 This ad is paid for with GHURA funds

Guam Housing and Urban Renewal Authority's (GHURA's) 2021 Low Income Housing Tax Credit (LIHTC) Qualified Allocation Plan (QAP) is available online for public comment at www.ghura.org starting on Monday, April 19, 2021. GHURA will hold a public meeting to discuss QAP comments at 10:00 a.m. on Thursday, May 06, 2021 via www.zoom.com Meeting ID: 994 5979 4739 and Passcode: GHURA. Zoom meeting details will also be posted on the GHURA website on the same day. Final public comments are due by 5:00 p.m. on Friday, May 07, 2021.

The QAP describes the basis that GHURA will use to allocate LIHTC Program credits of $6,660,957 available for the 2021 program year.

GHURA is the recognized housing credit agency authorized to allocate LIHTC Program credits in Guam. The United States 1986 Tax Reform Act created the federal low-income housing tax credit under Section 42 of the Internal Revenue Code (IRC) to assist the development of low-income rental housing by providing qualified owners with tax credits to offset their federal tax obligations. The LIHTC Program credits are available to owners of qualifying buildings and projects that meet certain low-income occupancy rent restrictions.

Section 42 of the IRC provides that Guam prepare a QAP to determine housing priorities and to establish the basis to award points to projects that will serve the lowest income tenants and oblige to serve qualified tenants for the longest periods. Examples of selection criteria include but not limited to project location, housing need characteristics, sponsor characteristics, and tenant populations with special needs.

Public Comment
 Any person(s), agencies or organizations wishing to comment on the 2021 QAP may submit written comments directly to GHURA during regular business hours of operation (Monday through Friday, from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.). To do so, please address written comments to the Executive Director RAY TOPASNA and deliver them to the GHURA office via drop box at the main office at 117 Bien Venida Avenue, Sinajana, Guam 96910.

Comments will also be accepted via email to the Chief Planner Katherine Taitano at katherine@ghura.org and Program Coordinator III Dominic Calvo at dcalvo@ghura.org.

Ms. Nolte requested the update in writing via email. She claims to still be waiting on other promised documentation for around a year now, such as email threads with the physician in question for her records. Dr. Berg will defer to legal counsel about what is allowed to be released to her by law and will get her all the documents he is allowed to release. Ms. Nolte’s last concern is her personal information shared in a past Board meeting which is now public record. The Board expresses their same concern and plans to bring this to the legislature to ensure this does not happen in future meetings.</li> <li>C.
