could rely on for the second straight year. In the finals of the Northwest Conference Tournament against top-seeded Pacific University, the No. 5-ranked Bruins pulled off the upset.

With four matches going on at once, it was Camacho's two-set win that scored the fifth and competition-ending point. Last year was the first time George Fox had won the NWC Tournament and there was some pressure to repeat, said Camacho.

"We knew that Pacific was going to give us their best and fight for the championship. There was a lot of pressure that I felt at the end of singles and doubles, but I tried to block it off," he said. "We didn't lose any starters from last year and we were able to pick up a couple of lineup players this year."

Once again, George Fox qualified for the NCAA Division 3 regional tournament which runs May 13-14. The announcement on who will host comes on May 12. Camacho and his team are laser-focused on that challenge.

One recent, but minor distraction has been a reason to celebrate. Camacho was voted in by NWC coaches to the All-Conference Roster, one of six selected to the second team. His doubles partner was also selected after the two finished with a 6-1 doubles record.

Camacho had three teammates named to the first team, one of which was honored as Player of the Year. His coach Jeff Cero was similarly honored by his peers as Coach of the Year.

After some time playing top-tier collegiate opponents, Camacho said there's no doubt his game has improved significantly.

"My serves are getting better and overall offensive game is starting to develop," said Camacho. "I have been in contact with proud he was not to win, but to showcase it to those on Guam. "This was a big win, especially on a platform with a big following," San Nicolas said. "I was happy with my performance and results. But it was really about showcasing my jiu-jitsu in Hawaii, and everyone watching."

He's currently preparing to enter and compete the upcoming Hawaii Triple Crown. "So back to back wins is really good momentum, so I will try my best to use it," San Nicolas said. "The Hawaii Triple Crown, is the next I will most likely jump in on that and go from there."
