Once Rules and Regulation are promulgated, applicants would have to start have to start from beginning as new applicants (i.e., not renewal applicants).</li> <li>• It appears that the applicants are not paying attention to the actual requirements prior to submitting their applications (e.g., CEU requirements are not fully met)</li> <li>• Some applicants seem to rely solely on the NASW Conference for CEUs, and do not seek other training sources from on-line courses or trainings in other jurisdictions that would count toward CEUs earned. In addition, applicants do not always include pertinent information needed to validate the CEUs hours earned (e.g., training description, course curriculum, agenda).</li> <li>• Suggested to seek support from the NASW to coordinate with other training entities to help validate the CEUs earned (e.g., to list contact hours, certificates, participation list, etc.).</li> <li>• Suggested a brochure be developed to explain the application/re-application process, as well as other pertinent information to help improve the application process. Noted that this could potentially be done in the interim while the Rules and Regulations are in the process of finalized.</li> </ul> The Chair agreed with above observations, and stated that the GBSW could send a letter to all licensees regarding the GBSW's concerns (late submission of renewal applications, the need to improve the evidentiary documentation needed to validate requirements are met, the need to submit authorization letters to access information from employers, etc), as this is an expectation of the GBSW and the professional responsibility of the applicant to help ensure a	GBSW	1119	Draft a letter to Licensees and NASW

THE SCORE

NCAA president soon to step down

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — NCAA President Mark Emmert is stepping down after 12 tumultuous years leading an association that has become increasingly marginalized while college sports has undergone massive changes and been besieged by political and legal attacks.

NCAA Board of Governors Chairman John DeGioia announced the move Tuesday and said it was by mutual agreement. The 69-year-old Emmert will continue to serve in his role until a new president is in place or until June 30, 2023.

The move is not entirely a surprise. The NCAA remains the biggest governing body in college athletics, but it is has been under sharp criticism for years as too heavy handed and even out of date with Emmert serving as the prime target.

Emmert has guided the NCAA through the most transformative period in the history of the more than 100-year-old organization. During the past decade, athletes have gained more power, benefits and ability to earn money than ever before. Amateurism has been redefined.

But Emmert has been viewed by some as not a catalyst for change but as an obstacle standing in the way — or at the least reactive instead of proactive.

"Throughout my tenure I've emphasized the need to focus on the experience and priorities of student-athletes," Emmert said in a release from the NCAA. "I am extremely proud of the work of the association over the last 12 years and especially pleased with the hard work and dedication of the national office staff here in Indianapolis."

The announcement comes one year after the board approved a contract extension for Emmert that ran through the 2025, a move that left many in college sports bewildered. Emmert's salary was nearly $3 million in 2021.

The NCAA has suffered a series of damaging court losses in the past decade that peaked with last year's 9-0 Supreme Court ruling against the association in an antitrust case. The decision undercut the NCAA's ability to govern college sports and prompted a total overhaul how it operates.

Years after losing an antitrust case over the NCAA's use of athletes' names, images and likenesses, the association finally changed its rules last June to allow the athletes to profit as paid sponsors and endorsers. The move came only after state lawmakers passed laws to neuter the NCAA's power. With Congress unwilling to provide federal protection, the NCAA has been unable to regulate NIL activity with uniform rules — leading to fresh criticism.

Emmert has been called before lawmakers in Washington numerous times over the past two years.

Emmert was appointed to the job in April 2010. He had led the University of Washington and LSU prior to taking over in Indianapolis. He replaced Myles Brand, who held the position for seven years before dying of cancer in 2009.

The job Emmert stepped into became increasingly more difficult as big-time college sports such as major college football and basketball grew into billion-dollar businesses.

could rely on for the second straight year. In the finals of the Northwest Conference Tournament against top-seeded Pacific University, the No. 5-ranked Bruins pulled off the upset.

With four matches going on at once, it was Camacho's two-set win that scored the fifth and competition-ending point. Last year was the first time George Fox had won the NWC Tournament and there was some pressure to repeat, said Camacho.

"We knew that Pacific was going to give us their best and fight for the championship. There was a lot of pressure that I felt at the end of singles and doubles, but I tried to block it off," he said. "We didn't lose any starters from last year and we were able to pick up a couple of lineup players this year."

Once again, George Fox qualified for the NCAA Division 3 regional tournament which runs May 13-14. The announcement on who will host comes on May 12. Camacho and his team are laser-focused on that challenge.

One recent, but minor distraction has been a reason to celebrate. Camacho was voted in by NWC coaches to the All-Conference Roster, one of six selected to the second team. His doubles partner was also selected after the two finished with a 6-1 doubles record.

Camacho had three teammates named to the first team, one of which was honored as Player of the Year. His coach Jeff Cero was similarly honored by his peers as Coach of the Year.

After some time playing top-tier collegiate opponents, Camacho said there's no doubt his game has improved significantly.

"My serves are getting better and overall offensive game is starting to develop," said Camacho. "I have been in contact with proud he was not to win, but to showcase it to those on Guam. "This was a big win, especially on a platform with a big following," San Nicolas said. "I was happy with my performance and results. But it was really about showcasing my jiu-jitsu in Hawaii, and everyone watching."

He's currently preparing to enter and compete the upcoming Hawaii Triple Crown. "So back to back wins is really good momentum, so I will try my best to use it," San Nicolas said. "The Hawaii Triple Crown, is the next I will most likely jump in on that and go from there."

Jeremiah San Nicolas competes with Joshua Alvarez during Fight 2 Win on April 30, 2022 in Honolulu, Hawaii. San Nicolas won via choke.
