

Scheffler's Masters win a family affair

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — It doesn't seem that long ago to Scott Scheffler that he was standing on the green behind Bergen Community College in Paramus, New Jersey, dutifully holding a flashlight while his only son — just 5 or 6 at the time — hit shots in the dark.

And if one of Scottie Scheffler's wayward strokes happened to smack into one of his sisters, so be it.

"He used to yell," Scott Scheffler said. "He would yell at us when he hit it. He would hit the girls."

It's what brothers do.

Nearly two decades later, Scottie Scheffler's aim is considerably better. Yes, that was the kid who used to peg his siblings with impunity tugging the green jacket over his broad shoulders after winning the Masters on Sunday afternoon.

And yes, that was most of the Scheffler clan — sisters Callie and Molly (other sister Sara is in Portugal) along with Scott and wife Diane — huddled together just outside Butler Cabin to celebrate a jet-fueled rise to the top that really wasn't that jet-fueled at all.

There were the days back in north New Jersey when the Scheffler kids were introduced to the game. They moved to Dallas when Diane switched law firms as a chief operating officer. They quickly decided to join Royal Oaks Country Club mostly because it meant Scott Scheffler could keep all four kids in one place.

While Scott Scheffler understands his son's origin story takes a familiar narrative and turns it on his head — it was Scott who served as the stay-at-home dad while Diane worked — he doesn't see it as revolutionary or strange or uncommon.

"It's just what you do as a father for your children," Scott Scheffler said, his eyes wet with tears while wearing a white Masters polo shirt on the grounds of a club where his son is now a champion. "You do for your kids you know. I've done for all of them. They've given us great joy. He's the one that did all the hard work, not me. I just raised him and tried the best I could to be a good dad."

Maybe, but someone had to get Team Scheffler to all those sporting events. Youth golf tournaments.

High school basketball practices. The list is seemingly endless. The fact it was dad doing most of the driving hardly mattered.

"Wasn't unusual for me," Scottie Scheffler said. "I didn't know any different. Fortunately for me, I grew up with three sisters and my dad was there, and he did a great job raising us."

Clippers look ahead to next season

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As down as they felt after blowing two chances to make the playoffs, the Los Angeles Clippers can't wait for next season.

That's when a healthy Kawhi Leonard is expected back in the lineup, alongside Paul George and Norman Powell.

"We get our main guys back," coach Tyronn Lue said. "I mean, we can be dangerous."

Leonard didn't play during the Clippers' roller coaster of a season that ended in a 105-101 play-in loss to the New Orleans Pelicans on Friday night. George didn't either, after entering the league's health and safety protocols earlier in the day.

Leonard could only watch as the Clippers blew a 13-point lead in the fourth quarter after letting a lead slip away in losing to Minnesota in the first play-in game.

George missed a large chunk of the season while injured and Powell was out for a couple months after joining the team in a February trade. Luke Kennard, the league's 3-point percentage leader, missed both play-in games with a sore hamstring.

The Clippers still managed to finish 42-40, staging several thrilling double-digit comebacks in the second half of games.

Supporting cast

Reggie Jackson provided a steady presence for a team wracked by injuries and COVID-19 issues that caused players to miss 385 total games. He averaged 16.8 points and 4.8 assists without Leonard and George serving as the primary playmakers. They'll be back to those roles next season.

"The sky's the limit when you get those two," Jackson said. "It's going to be about hopefully getting them healthy, meshing, and everybody improving individually. I can't help but smile already thinking about next year."

Marcus Morris said the team needs a backup point guard to contend for a championship.

Big man Ivica Zubac started all 76 games he played in, averaging 10.3 points and 8.5 rebounds.
